HOUSING PICTURE STUDIED

Harder Work By Builders Sought On Defense Jobs

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3—The government soon will take steps to stir up competition in the nation's defense housing program in moves expected to benefit both the industry and the consumer.

Proposals now under study would force home builders to work a little harder in their attempts to obtain defense housing projects from the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

But the extra effort will pay off to successful builders and also will guarantee the maximum housing value out of each dollar spent by the home buyer or renter in defense localities.

HHFA has been following a policy of handing out defense housing projects on a first come, first serve basis to builders as they file applications for housing allotments.

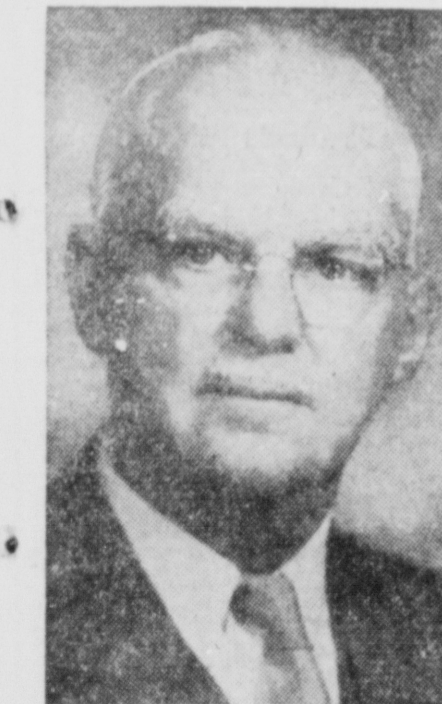

Officials say this method has caused delays and difficulties to the point where it will have to be replaced by a more selective system of handling the cases.

IN THE FUTURE, HHFA will require its local offices throughout the country to select the best deals builders offer on home construction regardless of the timing of the application.

This means the man who can

Drunken Driving Penalties Vary With Local Courts

A person convicted of driving while drunk in Pickaway County can have a rough row to hoe, but it depends a lot on what court hands down the penalty.

If a defendant goes before a minor court, such as a mayor or a justice of the peace, he can count on a fine and occasionally a short jail term.

But if his case is heard by a common pleas court, then he can expect full and severe punishment. This is because the common pleas judge is given by law a "court of record." Such is not the case with a mayor or a JP.

And "punishment" in a court of record does not end with the judge's sentence. While the sentence invariably will include suspension (from six months to life) of driving rights, the defendant is a marked man.

For one thing, a notation of his offense is made statewide. For another, his insurance costs immediately skyrocket—if he is allowed any insurance at all.

Insurance men say frankly that he is a "bad risk."

Most observers are in agreement that a person arrested for drunk driving are "first offenders" on the record only.

These observers say that the "first" offense merely was the "first" time he had been caught, that such persons probably had been driving while drunk on previous occasions.

Recently there has been a debate in legal circles on the manner in which drunk drivers should be handled, whether tried in common pleas court or in a minor court.

More than a year ago, Pickaway County mayors and magistrates agreed that a simple fine was not enough punishment for a drunken driver.

They agreed that such a defendant was one of the most dangerous persons in the community.

So, they took the suggestion of Prosecutor Guy Cline and began shunting defendants into common pleas court—the only local "court of record."

The plan worked excellently for a while.

In a year's time, more than 100 such cases were handled. All defendants had their driving rights suspended. These defendants no longer were menaces on the highways.

But a couple of weeks ago, the legal debate started and Circleville Mayor Thurman I. Miller began hearing the cases in his own court.

There the defendant received only a fine and there was no record of the case which would mark the defendant for reference by other police or by insurance firms.

Reds Given Compromise

Kaesong Issue Bogs Truce Talk

MUNSAN, Nov. 3—The Allies offered a compromise on the question of Kaesong today during Korea truce discussions at Panmunjom.

Maj. Gen. Henry I. Hodes, senior UN delegate, told the Communist negotiators that the Allied command is willing to place Kaesong within a buffer zone which is to be set up for an armistice.

Both sides want control of Kaesong the point through which the North Koreans poured their troops June 25, 1950, when they first invaded South Korea.

An Allied spokesman said the Communists were non-committal on the new Allied proposal to place Kaesong within a demilitarized zone.

Two men from each side—comprising a truce delegation subcommittee—conferred in the big brown tent at Panmunjom and apparently failed to make any appreciable progress on the buffer zone question.

AFTER THE morning session which lasted two and a half hours, Brig. Gen. William P. Nuckolls, the UN truce delegation spokesman, said the Communists "continued to refuse to pinpoint their battlefield."

He added that the Red delegates claimed that their proposal on a line of demarcation "compensated" for withdrawals which the UN is willing to make in order to effect a cease-fire.

The UN command offered to give up to battlement "bulges"—in the Kumsong area on the east-central and in the Kongsong sector on the extreme eastern flank.

The UN delegates spent considerable time in the morning session expounding arguments to the effect that the Allies should be offered compensation for any withdrawals from islands off the east and west coasts of Korea.

One of the major stumbling blocks in the path of a cease-fire is the question of who will control Kaesong, former site of the armistice parley. Both sides want the ancient capital since it is the key to the defenses of Seoul, 40 miles to the southeast, and classic invasion gateway to South Korea.

The buffer zone is only the first of four items on the truce conference agenda.

A UN SPOKESMAN emphasized Thursday, when hopes were high for an armistice, that fighting will go on even after a buffer zone is agreed upon and changes may have to be made later on the basis of the battlefield.

Other items on the agenda which was set up just after the truce delegates first convened on July 10 are: Arrangements for exchange of prisoners; establishment of a joint commission to supervise an armistice; and recommendations to the governments involved. The last subject is expected to include some kind of an agreement on withdrawal of foreign troops from Korea after the war is over.

5 U.S. Vessels Lost During War

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3—Five American ships have been sunk and 29 others damaged in action against the enemy since the start of the Korean war.

The Navy said all five of the vessels destroyed were sunk by mines off the Korean coast. Four were minesweepers and the other an Army tug.

Enemy shore batteries scored hits on 24 U.S. ships, and four others were damaged by mines. Another Navy craft, the Heavy Cruiser USS Rochester, was slightly damaged by an aerial bomb.

American casualties in the 34 naval actions totaled 102 dead, 21 missing and 282 wounded.

Federal Payroll Shows Decline

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3—The Byrd economy committee today reported the number of civilians on the federal payroll dropped in September for the first time in 15 months.

A decline of 11,875 workers left the government's civilian personnel at 2,495,519. The committee, headed by Sen. Byrd, (D) Va., said civilian agency employment was reduced 13,969, while civilian employment in the military branches increased 2,094.

IT CURBS IRON CURTAIN

Yank-Backed Turk Army Proven Small, Tough Baby

ISTANBUL, Nov. 3—Turkey's army is America's billion dollar baby today in the strategic Middle Eastern front against Communism.

It's a rough, tough youngster. How it could stand up against man-sized Russia is another question. The Turks say they are unperturbed, but impartial observers are more sanguine.

Turkish chiefs claim their 21 divisions and non-jet air force are ready to meet any attack from the estimated 43 divisions of second-rate Soviet troops facing them. They proudly predict they would fight to the last man.

And they probably would. Non-military sources give the Turks two weeks against a concerted attack.

Compared to the European front Turkey is in great shape. The $1 billion that the U.S. has poured into re-equipping the Turkish army has bought a lot. There are 21 divisions and four more that could be mobilized quickly in case of war.

EVERY ONE of those under arms is near enough fighting strength to put up a good show. This stands out against the ten that France promises to have at the end of this year.

Except for three, beautifully mounted horse cavalry divisions the Turks will be able to roll into any war on American wheels. Every division is partly or fully equipped with solid U.S. arms of every description, and while a lot of it is reconditioned World War II stuff, some of it is new, especially in the way of transport.

Moreover, the Turks are no chumps when it comes to learning how to use and maintain the complicated machines of war. An intensive program of instruction is gradually bringing out skills in tank and machine driving that were unknown in this agrarian country a few years ago.

Of the three services the army is in the best shape. The small air force is still equipped only with propeller driven F-47 fighters. The first U.S. jets are expected in a few weeks.

The Navy's main job is mine sweeping the strategic approaches to the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles. A handful of submarines (Continued on Page Two)

Royal Couple Taking Rest

MONTREAL, Nov. 3—Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh, wined, dined, cheered and feted for two days in Washington, today took the weekend off in the snow-blanketed Laurentian mountains.

Shut off from the world in private cabin in the vicinity of St. Agathe, Quebec, about 70 miles north of Montreal, the royal couple rested up for the final week of the North American tour starting Monday.

Phillips Trial Is In Recess For Weekend

COLUMBUS, Nov. 3—The second degree murder trial of George Phillips is in weekend recess today after a drama-packed court session late yesterday in which the accused testified in his own defense.

Leaning on his good arm, the 23-year-old insurance salesman looked squarely at the jury and in three words answered the question of whether he killed Mrs. Ruth Alter. "I did not," he said.

Under the questioning of the defense attorney, Phillips told the jury how he lost his right arm under an interurban car when he was 22 months old. He bared the stump of his arm to the jury.

He then detailed his activities last April 22, the day the Hilltop mother was brutally beaten and choked to death.

Politicians Wondering What Is Up

Truman Summons Stirs Conjecture

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower flew home today for Atlantic pact discussions with President Truman and found himself the center of one of the biggest political guessing games in years.

The general's plane, which left Paris last night, was scheduled to refuel in Iceland. It is expected to make one intermediate stop, probably in the New York area or at Westover Field, Mass., before landing at Fort Knox, Ky.

Not even the general knows all the answers to the hottest political questions since 1944 when everybody was guessing whether President Franklin D. Roosevelt would run for a fourth term.

The Atlantic Pact commander may or may not know the answer on whether he will run for President in 1952 and on what ticket, but even the five-star general is not certain of the reason for his sudden summons by President Truman to return to Washington.

THE OFFICIAL order of the President said the two-day talks starting Monday will be on Atlantic Pact matters, but the recently revived "Eisenhower - for - President" boom may also be a factor.

A scramble for straws in the wind produced the following:

1. A close friend of the general said in Paris that "General Ike" is considerably perturbed over the possibility that the President may ask him flatly if he intends to run. The close friend said Eisenhower himself hasn't reached an answer on that one.

2. Eisenhower shied away from a roundabout question from newsmen at Orly airport in Paris when he asked how long "Ike" thinks he will have to remain in Europe to complete his assignment.

As he disappeared into the plane the general, laughing, answered in one incomplete sentence: "Quarterback sneaks are all right in football, but if you made a yard on that one, brother. . ."

3. George E. Allen, friend of both President Truman and General Eisenhower and one-time Truman administration official, was queried on the question. Allen said he believes the White House announcement about "military business" tells the whole story although he added, "I could be wrong."

ALLEN ALSO said he does not know if the general will make the presidential race; in fact, Allen declared, he does not know if Mr. Truman will run.

4. Maj. John Eisenhower, son of the general, said in Fort Knox, Ky., where General and Mrs. Eisenhower will spend the weekend: "As far as I know, it's just going to be a family visit."

Piecing it all together, only President Truman knows at the moment why the general was summoned home. As for running for President, on which ticket he will run, and when he will announce his intentions, only General Eisenhower could know that.

Penalties Here Vary

court were counties. Gradually the number of local persons listed declined.
Court officials said this was because the "lesson" was sinking in. They were convinced that the new procedure was paying off.

The problem of whether the cases should be handled in common pleas court of a minor court arose Oct. 23 when Common Pleas Judge William D. Radcliff ordered a case against John Minor returned to mayor's court for a legal technicality.

Minor was accused of drunken driving in an affidavit filed by Prosecutor Cline.

The judge made the ruling following a hearing of a motion filed by the defendant asking that the case be struck from the files and remanded to the mayor's court.

The motion claimed that when the case was before the mayor originally, the defendant waived the right to trial by jury and submitted the case to the mayor for "final determination."

In a second hearing before Mayor Miller a fine of $100 and costs was levied against Minor after he waived a jury trial and entered a plea of guilty.

Court attaches point out one significant fact—whether the mayor hears the case or moves it on to the common pleas court, the mayor still gets the court costs with the exception of a dollar and a few cents which go to the county clerk of courts. In any event, the mayor and the city get the same slice of the costs. The mayor cannot "lose" financially either way.

Penalties against drunk drivers in the mayor's court are far from severe, the court relying on the curative value of a stiff fine alone.

Courts such as the mayor's and justice of the peace are permitted to levy no suspension of driving rights, such as in a court of record.

Exception has been the court of Justice of the Peace Oscar Root, who had been taking more drastic action in cutting down the number of drunken driving cases. In addition to a stiff fine, Root has been sending offenders to Pickaway County Jail for terms up to 10 days.

Another deterrent against drunk drivers is the skyrocketing rate of automobile insurance, for a driver convicted on a drunken driving count, and whose driving license has been suspended.

"Insurance rates are three times as high, after the license has been taken away," a local insurance man said. "No company wants to handle them (the convicted drivers) because they're bad risks."

Meanwhile, Mayor Miller's decision to either handle drunken driving cases himself, or to hand them on to the higher court of common pleas still is pending.

He earlier expressed his intention of "giving considerable thought" to whether the cases should be tried in his court, or sent over to common pleas from now on.

Miller this week reiterated his intention of "talking the matter over" with an authoritative group.

"This thing is too big for one individual to decide," he said. "There are many pros and cons to the situation and I think it should be talked over—possibly with city council, because they're interested, or with the Pickaway County Bar Association at some future date."

Disposition of future cases would "depend upon the individual a great deal," he contended, and when a case came before him in

About $610 Acre Paid By duPont For Local Land

A 286.67 acre tract of land south of Circleville in Pickaway Township has been sold to the duPont Co.

Deed for the plot, one of two adjacent tracts to be purchased by the big chemical firm, has been turned over to E. I. duPont de Nemours and Co. by Ward W. Walton.

Accompanying the transaction was the purchase of $192.50 worth of revenue stamps, issued at the rate of $1.10 per $1,000 purchase price.

According to customary procedure, the $192.50 revenue stamp purchase tends to show the purchase price was about $175,000 for the tract of land, roughly $610.45 per acre.

Walton obtained the tract of land several months ago from Walter Goodman and others of Circleville. Walton and seven others were involved in selling the plot to duPont, according to the records.

Remaining to be deeded to the manufacturing concern is a tract adjacent to the Walton land, a plot containing roughly 325 acres and owned by Mrs. Paul Adkins.

Herbert Ferguson, 56, of Stoutsville Route 1, was held in Pickaway County jail Saturday on two bonds totalling $4,000 following a cutting scrape Thursday night in a Circleville cafe.

Ferguson was bound to Pickaway County grand jury on bonds of $2,000 each Friday in the court of Mayor Thurman I. Miller on accusations of cutting with intent to wound.

The accusations were filed by Robert Tootle of 625 Watt street and Dan Hughes of 160 1/2 West Main street, bartenders in Son's Grill, South Court street.

Tootle and Hughes said Ferguson stabbed them Thursday night as they were attempting to remove him from the cafe. Tootle suffered a deep puncture wound of the left arm and side, while Hughes suffered a side wound.

Ferguson entered pleas of innocent to both accusations in the court.

Penalties against drunk drivers in the mayor's court are far from severe, the court relying on the curative value of a stiff fine alone.

Courts such as the mayor's and justice of the peace are permitted to levy no suspension of driving rights, such as in a court of record.

Exception has been the court of Justice of the Peace Oscar Root, who had been taking more drastic action in cutting down the number of drunken driving cases. In addition to a stiff fine, Root has been sending offenders to Pickaway County jail for terms up to 10 days.

Another deterrent against drunk drivers is the skyrocketing rate of automobile insurance, for a driver convicted on a drunken driving count, and whose driving license has been suspended.

"Insurance rates are three times as high, after the license has been taken away," a local insurance man said. "No company wants to handle them (the convicted drivers) because they're bad risks."

Meanwhile, Mayor Miller's decision to either handle drunken driving cases himself, or to hand them on to the higher court of common pleas still is pending.

He earlier expressed his intention of "giving considerable thought" to whether the cases should be tried in his court, or sent over to common pleas from now on.

Miller this week reiterated his intention of "talking the matter over" with an authoritative group. "This thing is too big for one individual to decide," he said. "There are many pros and cons to the situation and I think it should be talked over—possibly with city council, because they're interested, or with the Pickaway County Bar Association at some future date."

Disposition of future cases would "depend upon the individual a great deal," he contended, and when a case came before him in

About $610 Acre Paid By duPont For Local Land

A 286.67 acre tract of land south of Circleville in Pickaway Township has been sold to the duPont Co.

Deed for the plot, one of two adjacent tracts to be purchased by the big chemical firm, has been turned over to E. I. duPont de Nemours and Co. by Ward W. Walton.

Accompanying the transaction was the purchase of $192.50 worth of revenue stamps, issued at the rate of $1.10 per $1,000 purchase price.

According to customary procedure, the $192.50 revenue stamp purchase tends to show the purchase price was about $175,000 for the tract of land, roughly $610.45 per acre.

Walton obtained the tract of land several months ago from Walter Goodman and others of Circleville. Walton and seven others were involved in selling the plot to duPont, according to the records.

Remaining to be deeded to the manufacturing concern is a tract adjacent to the Walton land, a plot containing roughly 325 acres and owned by Mrs. Paul Adkins.

He suffered chest injuries and head bruises in the accident which demolished his bread truck. The other driver, Harold Coleman, 27, of Chillicothe, was unhurt.

Soldiers, conscripted for two years, get the equivalent of 23 cents a month. They sleep on a wooden bed. The uniforms are warm wool but poorly and crudely made. There is no PX to buy the necessities that the American takes for granted.

"I don't think any other army in the world would take and do what the Turkish army is called upon to do, without mutiny. Only by the most severe penny-pinching have the Turks kept a force in being that has held the line against Communism for 11 years.

Protestants, Catholics, Jews Working Together On California Campus

WESTWOOD, Cal., Nov. 3—Ten different religions have joined together on the University of California campus in an experiment in religious cooperation in which priests, rabbis, and ministers serve together.

The group, known as the University Religious Conference, has thrived at the Southern California institution since 1928 with thousands of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish students joining hands in the widely-hailed venture.

Its purpose is to teach morals and ethics to students at the college level without impinging on their freedom to follow their own faiths.

The different faiths, each represented by a fulltime rabbi, priest or minister, maintain offices in the new URC building on the edge of the Westwood campus.

There students consult with their spiritual advisers and meet in conference and for social get-togethers with members of their own faiths and in mixed groups. Harmony is the keynote of the whole undertaking.

Idea for URC was born 30 years ago on the campus of the University of Minnesota when O. D. Foster returned to his alma mater after serving as a Protestant chaplain in World War I. He said the religion ought to unite—not in dogma or in faith—but in action.

Foster got his hearing in Los Angeles at a time when the university campus was to be moved to outlying Westwood. The religious groups were alarmed at the thought of buying new property and they seized on Foster's idea to combine in one building.

The groups united and Thomas S. Evans, a layman, was hired to head the conference. He welded the groups into the University Religious Conference as it is known today. With him from New York came his secretary, Adaline C. Guenther, who became executive secretary of the conference upon Evans' death several years ago.

Miss Guenther, a blue-eyed, intelligent woman who speaks with an Indiana twang, said that a half century ago the major religious groups figured that they were getting nowhere in presenting religion to students. They could not present religious programs in the public schools. In colleges the groups were separated and worked independently.

Miss Guenther speaks with enthusiasm of the going project from the corner desk of a sunlit office lined with scores of pictures of campus queens, football heroes and men in uniform who during the last two decades have let URC touch on their lives.

"Democracy can only exist if it is a recognition of a common moral standard," she stated. "The conference serves as a common meeting ground for all creeds. It is only through groups working together

WANTED: 200 'SKY PILOTS'

By ESTHER V. W. TUFTY

Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Wanted: 200 more chaplains in the Air Force. That's what the four Air Force chaplains told this correspondent on a recent cross-country flight. That many are needed to supply the "spiritual leadership in comparable strength to the expanding size of the Air Force."

A C-47 is a slow moving plane and the distance from Bolling Field on the Potomac to International Airport in Los Angeles is long.

At first, Brig. Gen. Augustus F. Gearhard, who is No. 2 ranking chaplain in the Air Force, was reluctant to be interviewed because his branch of the service "deals in intangibles." However, it is the intangibles, he admitted, which make the difference between a good and bad airman.

The general, who calls Milwaukee "home," likes to remind the new airmen that the most famous heroes of World War I and II were "clean-living, religious and not vulgar in their speech."

SGT. ALVIN YORK of Tennessee and Maj. Richard I. Bong of Wisconsin were "two of my boys." Neither were of the Catholic faith of the general who served with York when the 328th Infantry was fighting in World War I in France and with Bong when he was giving new meaning to bravery with the Fifth Air Force in New Guinea in World War II.

In this new emergency, the chaplain's role has shifted its emphasis on the home bases. In the Air Force, each base is considered a "parish."

More effort is made to fit the men on the base into the nearby community. Churches and clubs are marshalled into offering and extending "something to do" in town at night. Airmen are taken "home to dinner." The chaplain is the liaison officer.

The chaplain's best work, however, is with the individual airman. Only twice is it compulsory for the new arrival to see the chaplain. First, when he is inducted. Second, when he arrives at his first base. After that it's up to him.

The great majority sooner or later... seek the chaplain, the only officer whom he can see at any time. No matter what his trouble may be... marriage to a Japanese girl, worry about sickness at home, inability to get on with the other men in his outfit... his chaplain will listen.

THIS BRINGS the chaplain close to finding out what manner of men are to be found in our Air Force. This is the consensus: "He's an idealist but he lacks the spiritual education to feed that idealism."

To fill that gap, an experiment was tried at Samson Air Force Base in New York. On the "free" Thursday evening an interdenominational instruction session was held.

The chaplains expected not more than a handful to respond. However, the place was filled week after week. The young men asked about immortality, faith, God and got answers in simple soldier-talk language. For the chaplains made "regular fellows" to get the confidence of the men.

The three other chaplains traveling with the general were of the Catholic faith, too. They were: Lt. Col. Constantine E. Ziellinski of Holyoke, Mass.; retired Col. Patrick C. Nolan of Jacksonville, Fla., and Col. Alphonse B. Slivinski of Saginaw, Mich.

They made clear the Air Force "can not recruit chaplains" in the same manner as other recruiting is done. The churches readily respond, however. Representation, incidentally, is based proportionately on the official church census, so there are 30 per cent Catholics, 67 per cent Protestants and the rest come from other denominations.

Pope Reaffirms Stand That Life Is 'Inviolable'

ROME, Nov. 3—Pope Pius XII has reaffirmed the Roman Catholic church's stand that life is inviolable.

Addressing the delegates to the Congress of Catholic Women Obstetricians, the pope said that "it is against natural and divine law to suppress (kill) a newborn child or infant before birth."

He added that no medical, social, eugenic or moral "indication" can provide a valid reason for the direct and deliberate doing away of an innocent human being.

Even when the saving of a mother's life is concerned, he said, the killing of an infant is illicit.

The pontiff emphasized that it is against natural and divine law to suppress those with physical and psychic defects as undesirable to the community.

He urged the midwives to combat contraception and preach wholesomeness of maternity as a cornerstone of marriage.

Four Networks To Back Religion In Life Drive

NEW YORK, Nov. 3—A four network broadcast at 11:15 p. m. Sunday will present John Foster Dulles, General Matthew B. Ridgway, Raymond Massey and others in a 15-minute "kick-off" program to mark the opening of the non-sectarian Religion In American Life campaign for November, 1951.

The networks carrying the broadcast are: ABC, CBS, MBS and NBC.

Dulles, Ridgway and others participating in the broadcast will base their messages on the critical need for all Americans to join in strengthening the spiritual forces which are the fundamental source of the nation's power.

They will urge everyone to share in the Religion In American Life campaign by attending and supporting the church or synagogue of his choice.

Sermon Theme Is Readied In 1st EUB Church

Second in a series of sermons based upon the theme "Christ Calls to Commitment—To Be Quiet-Hearted" will be delivered Sunday by the Rev. Carl L. Wilson in First EUB church.

The sermon will be on "Be Still and Know That I Am God," based on text from Isaiah 6:1 and John 1:8-10.

Due to the installation of a heating plant, worship service Sunday in First Evangelical United Brethren church will be held in the service center.

Children's classes will meet in the lounges during the morning, while older classes will be united with the adults during unified worship at 9:30 a. m.

A youth rally will be observed during the service by the young people of the church, under direction of Fern Wise and Fred Brown.

Fidelis Chorus, directed by Clarence Radcliffe, will sing an anthem entitled "I Shall Not Want," featuring a quartet consisting of Phyllis Hawkes, Ruth Stiers, Pat Wellington and Virginia Wise.

Hymns for the service will be "Have Thine Own Way, Lord" and "Open My Eyes That I May See."

Final Revival Service Is Due For Nazarenes

Last in a series of special revival services will be held at 7:30 p. m. Sunday in Circleville's Church of the Nazarene.

Ending their two-week campaign during the service will be the Rev. and Mrs. Eddy Burnum. The couple also will direct worship services at 10:30 a. m. Sunday.

Sunday school will begin at 9:30, directed by Superintendent Jack Mumaw. Lesson theme will be "God Reveals Himself To Moses."

Young people of the church are to meet at 6:45 p. m.

God Reveals Himself to Moses

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Exodus 3-4.

Moses led his father-in-law's flock to Mount Horeb. There he saw a bush that flamed but did not burn. God spoke to him out of the bush, telling him that He, Jehovah, had heard the captive Israelites' cries in Egypt, and was sending him to set them free.

Moses told the Lord he was not a ready speaker and could not make the Israelites believe that he was sent from God to free them. Jehovah told him to throw his staff on the ground, where it became a serpent, and showed Moses other miracles to perform.

Angered at Moses' reluctance to undertake His mission, the Lord told him to go to Egypt, and his brother, Aaron, would meet him in the wilderness, and he would be Jehovah's voice. Moses and Aaron met, and Moses told Aaron all that the Lord had said.

Moses and Aaron gathered together all the elders of the children of Israel, and Aaron spoke all the words that the Lord had spoken unto Moses and showed them the miracles. They believed him and bowed their heads and worshipped.

Protestants, Catholics, Jews Working Together On California Campus

WESTWOOD, Cal., Nov. 3—Ten different religions have joined together on the University of California campus in an experiment in religious cooperation in which priests, rabbis, and ministers serve together.

The group, known as the University Religious Conference, has thrived at the Southern California institution since 1928 with thousands of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish students joining hands in the widely-hailed venture.

Its purpose is to teach morals and ethics to students at the college level without impinging on their freedom to follow their own faiths.

The different faiths, each represented by a fulltime rabbi, priest or minister, maintain offices in the new URC building on the edge of the Westwood campus.

There students consult with their spiritual advisers and meet in conference and for social get-togethers with members of their own faiths and in mixed groups. Harmony is the keynote of the whole undertaking.

Idea for URC was born 30 years ago on the campus of the University of Minnesota when O. D. Foster returned to his alma mater after serving as a Protestant chaplain in World War I. He said the religion ought to unite—not in dogma or in faith—but in action.

Foster got his hearing in Los Angeles at a time when the university campus was to be moved to outlying Westwood. The religious groups were alarmed at the thought of buying new property and they seized on Foster's idea to combine in one building.

The groups united and Thomas S. Evans, a layman, was hired to head the conference. He welded the groups into the University Religious Conference as it is known today. With him from New York came his secretary, Adaline C. Guenther, who became executive secretary of the conference upon Evans' death several years ago.

Miss Guenther, a blue-eyed, intelligent woman who speaks with an Indiana twang, said that a half century ago the major religious groups figured that they were getting nowhere in presenting religion to students. They could not present religious programs in the public schools. In colleges the groups were separated and worked independently.

Miss Guenther speaks with enthusiasm of the going project from the corner desk of a sun-lit office lined with scores of pictures of campus queens, football heroes and men in uniform who during the last two decades have let URC touch on their lives.

"Democracy can only exist if it is a recognition of a common moral standard," she stated. "The conference serves as a common meeting ground for all creeds. It is only through groups working together that Democracy will be immeasurably more effective."

She said that the aim of the conference is accomplished by small informal student-led groups of each faith who meet independently and then with each other to evolve a common working faith and inspiration.

The religious groups housed in the URC building include Jewish, Catholic, Episcopal, Lutheran, Congregationalist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, Disciple, Mormon and Quaker.

The building is operated on a $50,000-a-year budget to which movie notables and leaders in Los Angeles-Hollywood business life contribute.

At the time of school opening, cards are presented students. It is optional for the student to fill out and indicate his religion. The cards then go to the proper faith in the URC building.

Five out of 11 students do not choose to sign the cards and it is these five who become the target of the URC as a whole in an attempt to get the disinterested into a faith of some kind or other.

Good Literature Is Theme For Calvary Church

"Good Literature Sunday" is the theme for worship service this Sunday in Calvary Evangelical United Brethren church.

It is a day when emphasis throughout the denomination is upon the reading of good literature in the homes.

In preparation for this Sunday, the members of the congregation received this past week a letter and folder presenting the literature of the EUB church. Also this is the time during the year when subscriptions are received for the denomination papers.

In continuing his message upon the theme "Christ Calls," the Rev. James A. Herbst will preach upon the subject, "Christ Calls Us To Spiritual Exercises."

The children's department of the church will share in the morning services and the pastor will have a special message for them. A special musical number will be sung by the Christian Caroler's Choir. It is entitled, "Pilot Of Galilee."

They will be directed by Mrs. J. A. Herbst and accompanied by Mrs. Richard Crawford. Dale DeLong, Sunday school superintendent will assist the pastor in the worship service.

WANTED: 200 'SKY PILOTS'

By ESTHER V. W. TUFTY

Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Wanted: 200 more chaplains in the Air Force. That's what the four Air Force chaplains told this correspondent on a recent cross-country flight. That many are needed to supply the "spiritual leadership in comparable strength to the expanding size of the Air Force."

A C-47 is a slow moving plane and the distance from Bolling Field on the Potomac to International Airport in Los Angeles is long.

At first, Brig. Gen. Augustus F. Gearhard, who is No. 2 ranking chaplain in the Air Force, was reluctant to be interviewed because his branch of the service "deals in intangibles." However, it is the intangibles, he admitted, which make the difference between a good and bad airman.

The general, who calls Milwaukee "home," likes to remind the new airmen that the most famous heroes of World War I and II were "clean-living, religious and not vulgar in their speech."

SGT. ALVIN YORK of Tennessee and Maj. Richard I. Bong of Wisconsin were "two of my boys." Neither were of the Catholic faith of the general who served with York when the 325th Infantry was fighting in World War I in France and with Bong when he was giving new meaning to bravery with the Fifth Air Force in New Guinea in World War II.

In this new emergency, the chaplain's role has shifted its emphasis on the home bases. In the Air Force, each base is considered a "parish."

More effort is made to fit the men on the base into the nearby community. Churches and clubs are marshalled into offering and extending "something to do" in town at night. Airmen are taken "home to dinner." The chaplain is the liaison officer.

The chaplain's best work, however, is with the individual airman. Only twice is it compulsory for the new arrival "to see the chaplain." First, when he is inducted. Second, when he arrives at his first base. After that it's up to him.

The great majority sooner or later... seek the chaplain, the only officer whom he can see at any time. No matter what his trouble may be... marriage to a Japanese girl, worry about sickness at home, inability to get on with the other men in his outfit... his chaplain will listen.

THIS BRINGS the chaplain close to finding out what manner of men are to be found in our Air Force.

This is the consensus: "He's an idealist but he lacks the spiritual education to feed that idealism."

To fill that gap, an experiment was tried at Samsom Air Force Base in New York. On the "free" Thursday evening an interdenominational instruction session was held.

The chaplains expected not more than a handful to respond. However, the place was filled week after week. The young men asked about immortality, faith, God and got answers in simple soldier-talk language. For the chaplains must be "regular fellows" to get the confidence of the men.

The three other chaplains traveling with the general were of the Catholic faith, too. They were: Lt. Col. Constantine E. Zielinski of Holyoke, Mass.; retired Col. Patrick C. Nolan of Jacksonville, Fla., and Col. Alphonse B. Slivinski of Saginaw, Mich.

They made clear the Air Force "can not recruit chaplains" in the same manner as other recruiting is done. The churches readily respond, however. Representation, incidentally, is based proportionately on the official church census, so there are 30 per cent Catholics, 67 per cent Protestants and the rest come from other denominations.

Pope Reaffirms Stand That Life Is 'Inviolable'

ROME, Nov. 3—Pope Pius XII has reaffirmed the Roman Catholic church's stand that life is inviolate. Addressing the delegates to the Congress of Catholic Women Obstetricians, the pope said that "it is against natural and divine law to suppress (kill) a newborn child or infant before birth."

He added that no medical, social, eugenic or moral "indication" can provide a valid reason for the direct and deliberate doing away of an innocent human being.

Even when the saving of a mother's life is concerned, he said, the killing of an infant is illicit.

The pontiff emphasized that it is against natural and divine law to suppress those with physical and psychic defects as undesirable to the community.

He urged the midwives to combat contraception and preach wholesomeness of maternity as a cornerstone of marriage.

Four Networks To Back Religion In Life Drive

NEW YORK, Nov. 3—A four network broadcast at 11:15 p. m. Sunday will present John Foster Dulles, General Matthew B. Ridgway, Raymond Massey and others in a 15-minute "kick-off" program to mark the opening of the non-sectarian Religion In American Life campaign for November, 1951.

The networks carrying the broadcast are: ABC, CBS, MBS and NBC.

Dulles, Ridgway and others participating in the broadcast will base their messages on the critical need for all Americans to join in strengthening the spiritual forces which are the fundamental source of the nation's power.

They will urge everyone to share in the Religion In American Life campaign by attending and supporting the church or synagogue of his choice.

UNHAPPY MARINES

THE United States Marine Corps is about the last place most Americans would expect to find a morale problem. Yet it's present and, according to a Senate subcommittee investigating committee, there is good reason for it.

While not saying so in writing, the committee seems to sympathize with the Marines who have been complaining about being recalled to service after having fought all through World War II. It discovered both money and human resources were being wasted.

It reported the existence in the Department of Defense of a "chaft corps" composed of enough able-bodied men to form a division of combat troops but still on assignment to clerical duty.

In the judgment of the committee, much of the restlessness among members of this "once proud corps" is attributable to the fact they lack an outlet for their "gripes." It recommends, therefore, the establishment of a system through which enlisted personnel may have a free right to register grievances without fear of reprisal.

As a complementary measure and as a means perhaps of reducing the number of grievances, the committee suggests inauguration of a more effective troop information program which will keep enlisted men acquainted with Marine Corps policy and its effect on them as individuals.

From the average citizen the reaction to these revelations is likely to be that something out to be done by somebody. The situation is one which must not be allowed to go uncorrected.

TOTAL ECLIPSES

THE U. S. will send experts to Egypt next February to observe a total eclipse of the sun calculated to last for three minutes. The United States Navy is particularly interested in the phenomenon to further certain studies relating to navigational and other problems.

If the experts will stay home, they will observe numerous total political eclipses in the United States next year. A tide of votes will come between aspirants and the shining offices they seek, obscuring the lovely prospect forever. This will happen scores of times in the primaries, in the conventions and in the general elections.

Such total eclipses at home may not have much to do with the navigational problems of the Navy, but they will have a heavy bearing on the shoals, tides, snags and other hazards which affect the navigation of the Ship of State.

Official Washington consumes 225,000 cups of coffee every day, according to a report, thus driving up the cost of coffee as well as taxes.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

No matter whether one favors or opposes American diplomatic representation at the Vatican, it must be obvious that nothing can be gained by indecorous conduct in our relations with the Pope.

Nothing can be gained by the United States, nor does it strengthen Christianity in this era of a Marxian onslaught on the religions of God that so important a matter should be used to divert the attention from corruption in the internal revenue offices.

Surely President Truman knew that Congress was adjourning when he sent Gen. Mark Clark's nomination to the Senate; everybody else knew that. Why then throw this bomb at us?

The United States has had relations with the Vatican since 1797 when John B. Sartori, though only a consul, was granted diplomatic courtesies. At that time, the papal states were an extensive area in Italy, some 16,000 square miles as compared with 109 square miles today. However, it would seem from our best religious history, "Church and State in the United States," by Anson Phelps Stokes, that representation was opposed and faded as an issue until 1847 when President Polk sent a message to Congress on the subject:

"The secretary of state has submitted an estimate to defray the expense of opening diplomatic relations with the papal states. The interesting political events now in progress in these states, as well as a just regard to our commercial interests have in my opinion rendered such a measure highly expedient."

The consensus of opinion at that time was that whereas it would benefit this country to be represented at the Vatican politically, it would not be right to have representation to the pope as head of a church. The House of Representatives, in which there were only two Roman Catholic members, voted in favor of providing funds 137 to 15. The Senate also passed the measure and Jacob L. Martin, a convert to Catholicism, was appointed the first charge d'affaires.

William H. Seward, secretary of state, in 1862, wrote to Richard M. Blatchford, U. S. minister to the papal states:

"It was under these circumstances that this government, in 1848, wisely determined that while it maintained representatives in the capitals of every other civilized state, and even at the capitals of many semi-civilized states which reject the whole Christian religion, it was neither wise nor necessary to exclude Rome from the circle of our diplomatic intercourse. Thus far the new relation then established has proved pleasant and beneficial."

A major factor in the discontinuance of this representation was the unwillingness of the papal authorities to permit Protestant worship outside the legation grounds. An ambassador or a minister resident in a foreign country is, by the law of nations, permitted to worship in his own private chapel. But this had become difficult in Rome. Rufus L. King, our minister, wrote to Secretary of State Seward:

"It has not unfrequently occurred that the congregation, worshipping under the minister's roof, has reached the number of two hundred and fifty, or three hundred; and more than once has been much larger than could be accommodated in the apartments provided."

SYNOPSIS

When highly gregarious Dr. Nicholas Cowan asked Dr. Mollie Brooks, his lovely co-worker at Boone Hospital Group, to marry him, she turned him down flat. Too snug to make a good husband she thought. So she centered her interest on the new young resident surgeon, Dr. Peter Shepherd, who had much to learn. When Mollie was suddenly stricken with abdominal pain, Shepherd attended her at Boone. Influenced by the evil whisperings of Clara Wayne, his landlady, Peter unfortunately made certain tests on Mollie, and although these proved negative, they nevertheless gave rise to ugly gossip. Outraged by this indignity, Dr. Cowan decides to teach Shepherd a lesson in professional ethics, one he will not forget. At a staff meeting, he humiliates and criticizes for having needed Clara Wayne, Peter calls on Mollie Brooks to apologize. She receives him graciously. For all his mistakes, she likes this naive young man.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

"I ENVY your wonderful patient-relationship, Peter told Mollie.

"Well—one is good with children—or not."

"I know that. But their parents are quite a different matter."

"Oh, dear, yes!" laughed Mollie. She looked alertly at Peter. "Did the parents of my little darlings give you trouble?"

"Quite a bit. They were exceedingly suspicious of me as a substitute."

"I know, but that's a course all young doctors run."

"Did you have to?"

"A woman?"

He nodded. "I reckon." He finished his drink, and set the glass down, his pleasant face thoughtful.

"His attitude was a special jolt to me," he confessed. "You know, not wanting me to adjust Johnny's weights, or to take of Mary's cast—because it had taken me a while longer than the average young doctor, I think, to get over the notion that I was on trial before my patients and their families."

"But you were on trial. Are?"

"Oh, yes, but they don't know I am. Once I began to realize—after that while it took, you know—once it came through to me that the patients were ready to look up to me and would trust me if I'd give them a chance—"

"What sort of chance?" asked Mollie quickly. She liked this intimate contact with a fresh and learning mind.

"Why, by being trustworthy. He laughed a little. "That's pretty corny, isn't it? But once I realized those things, I began to become something of a doctor..."

"I think you'll probably be a very good doctor," said Mollie as earnestly as he had spoken. "You seem to have your own gift for patient-relationship."

"Well, I like people—"

"That's what it takes."

He stood up, buttoned his suit jacket. "Then if I can learn the things Cowan says I have to know—"

"Did he specify those things?"

"I guess he did. He's pretty fast on his feet, you know. Sort of whizzes past a country boy like me. But I gathered I was not to be too scientific on one hand, and not too receptive to gossip on the other."

Mollie considered this. And nodded. "Yes, I expect that is what he told you." She smiled up at him. "Your landlady is a wonderful woman, you know."

"Yes. But she talks too much. And so do I, I'm afraid. I've tired you."

"Oh, no! I'm quite well again. And it was kind of you to come."

"You don't know the nerve it took!" he said fervently. "I was scared to death."

"Goodness! What did you expect me to do or say?"

He laughed. "I don't really know. I certainly didn't expect to spend a pleasant evening here, nor to have you act as if this were just any call on any girl."

This last remark really pleased her. She couldn't have said why. She knew, but she would have found it difficult to put into words, that she was pleased to be considered a normal girl on whom this attractive young man could call, and with whom he could spend a pleasant hour.

She liked Peter Shepherd. And Peter liked Mollie. Her kindness to him increased his remorse to the extent that, on reaching his own house, he marched up the stairs and into Clara Wayne's living room with considerable fire in his golden eyes.

Clara was crocheting something elaborate in purple and white thread and finished a certain stitch before looking up at the indignant young man. "What are you so upset about?" she asked pleasantly. "Here—have some fudge?"

"No! I mean—no, thank you, Mrs. Wayne. I—"

How could he eat her candy and tell her off as he intended to do?

"I know," she said brightly. "I can smell it on you. My husband wasn't anything like a drinker, but sometimes when he was tired and had got his feet wet, he would drink a little whisky to warm him, and then he wouldn't ever eat sweets, either."

"Oh, fudge!" Peter took a square of fudge and ate it, biting upon a nut shell which somehow added to the business of deflating his anger. Because Clara could apologize about that and go on about how difficult it was to get all of the shell out of black walnuts. By the time she had finished, Peter must think a bit before he could state his accusation and his suggestion that she not "start things about people like Dr. Brooks."

"Oh, is that where you had your drink?" she asked brightly.

Peter sat down in the second armchair and looked earnestly at his landlady. "Look, Mrs. Wayne," he said carefully. "I've come from Dr. Brooks—she gave me one drink. That is, it was there, and I took one small drink. Now, I went to call on Dr. Brooks because I owed her an apology."

"How is Mollie? Is she feeling better?"

"She's quite all right. She had a temporary gastric infection which cleared up quickly. We don't know what caused it, except that we do know it wasn't caused by—"

by what you suggested to me."

"It?" Now Clara was listening, innocent, shocked...

"You," said Peter hardily. "And that's what I'm trying to tell you—You must not go around telling that women—unmarried ones, especially—may be pregnant."

"Oh, could that have been..." asked Clara, wide-eyed.

"No!" shouted Peter. "It couldn't! Because you suggested it, and I—"

Clara folded her crochet work, and put it into a bag. "I'm very sorry, Peter, if you've been in trouble, but I can't see how I'm to blame."

"You took me over to Dr. Brooks' apartment, didn't you? The night she was sick?"

"Yes. I'm no doctor—"

"You made a diagnosis."

"I did not." Clara laughed at the enormity of such a suggestion. "Hazel and I talked to each other and decided her pain was like—Oh, me, I hope you aren't the kind of doctor to let someone like us tell you what's wrong with a patient!"

Which was, essentially, what Nicholas Cowan had "hoped."

Peter got up and went out of Clara's room, trying to figure out where he stood. And had he, or had he not, told this woman to keep her mouth shut?

Whatever he decided, keeping her mouth shut amounted to a physical impossibility with Clara. By the next morning, when she made her usual rounds of the households on the Square, her remarks were well cast into a new mold. Dr. Brooks went back to work today. I think it's too soon myself—I don't think they'd make a mistake about a thing like that at Boone, do you?"

Mrs. Irvine did not repeat Clara's story to the doctor, who might have squashed it at that point, but she did ask one or two of the other women on the Square if they'd heard that Dr. Brooks had...

And, being Dr. Brooks' wife, they supposed she knew, and repeated the story as a startling fact.

Clara went on her way, too, pushing the tale under doors otherwise closed to the matter, letting it seep in through keyholes and transoms. Such hospital personnel as heard the story denied its truth, but their denials bore less weight than the more sensational report. Nicholas, in the hotel barbershop, his face concealed by a hot towel, heard his own name mentioned when the matter came up for a brief discussion.

That evening he went to her apartment and stayed long enough to determine that she was unaware that gossip was still active about her and her illness. He was exceedingly glad that this should be so. He could only hope that the talk would die of inertia before Mollie knew there was talk.

The story died, and sooner than he had hoped, but inertia was not the cause.

Have you ever wondered how the intrepid scout and Indian fighter, William F. Cody, won the sobriquet of "Buffalo Bill"? In 1868, the thousands of workmen engaged in laying tracks for the country's first transcontinental railroad, the Union Pacific, had to be fed, and contractors made a deal with Cody to supply twelve buffaloes a day. For his labors, faithfully rendered, Cody got $500 a month—and a nickname that clung to him the rest of his days.

MARCH OF EVENTS

Middle East Oil Trouble
May Spread, U. S. Feels

Dispute Over Suez Canal
Seen Even More Serious

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—American officials frankly are worried that the oil crisis in Iran may spread to other Middle Eastern countries such as Iraq and Saudi Arabia, with a possible loss of oil to the Western nations.

It is feared that the success of the oil policies of Iranian Premier Mohammed Mossadeq may arouse movements of a similar nature in the other Middle East nations.

Such nationalization drives in Iraq or Saudi Arabia would not have the repercussions involving Britain that the Iranian situation does but, nevertheless, they would confront the West with serious oil problems.

On the more immediate issue of Iran, United States officials feel that Britain has played its hand badly by not sensing the situation was coming up. It is felt the British should have made an early move to head off a crisis.

Experts now believe that the oil industry of Iran may be lost. They say the Iranians can't operate the refineries and there is no world market for crude oils which Iran plans to sell.

SUEZ PROBLEM—An even more serious Middle East problem now is the Suez canal dispute between Britain and Egypt. Look for the United States to urge upon the British a quick and amicable settlement of the controversy.

United States officials are concerned over growing sentiment in Egypt for a non-aggression pact with Russia. Such an Egyptian move would completely cancel out western plans for a Middle East defense alliance.

State department officials fear that such an Egyptian-Russian treaty will become a reality if the tense situation continues and more blood is shed over the Suez question.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson is expected to talk with British officials at the United Nations assembly in Paris, seeking a formula for ending the dispute. However, he may find it difficult to work out a settlement.

POLITICAL HOT POTATO—Back on the domestic scene, political experts are saying that President Truman may have seized a political "hot potato" when he nominated Gen. Mark Clark as the first United States ambassador to the Vatican.

Not only is it doubtful whether Clark will ever be approved by the Senate for the post, but the appointment may have strong repercussions in the 1952 election campaign if Mr. Truman decides to run again.

Most Washington observers feel that the Clark nomination was a political move. They say the timing of the appointment is certain to influence next year's campaigns.

Many of the Protestant sects are sure to bring strong pressure against the action on the grounds it violates the separation of church and state idea—and some Catholics also may turn against the President in the belief he was not sincere in his action.

DIXIE REVOLT—The President also faces trouble on other fronts. Strategy for a strong anti-Truman campaign by Southern Democrats may be mapped at the Southern Governors' conference in Arkansas in mid-November.

Gov. James F. Byrnes of South Carolina brought the anti-Truman drive into the open at the recent governors' meeting at Gatlinburg, Tenn., but he soft-pedaled the discussions at that time.

Byrnes feels that the problem can be more appropriately talked over at the southerners' own conference at Hot Springs.

The scope of the Dixie bolt will depend upon whom the party nominates for President. The most Byrnes can hope to accomplish on a realistic basis is to try to put a southerner on the ticket for vice president.

UNHAPPY MARINES

THE United States Marine Corps is about the last place most Americans would expect to find a morale problem. Yet it's present and, according to a Senate subcommittee investigating committee, there is good reason for it.

While not saying so in writing, the committee seems to sympathize with the Marines who have been complaining about being recalled to service after having fought all through World War II. It discovered both money and human resources were being wasted.

It reported the existence in the Department of Defense of a "chaft corps" composed of enough able-bodied men to form a division of combat troops but still on assignment to clerical duty.

In the judgment of the committee, much of the restlessness among members of this "once proud corps" is attributable to the fact they lack an outlet for their "gripes." It recommends, therefore, the establishment of a system through which enlisted personnel may have a free right to register grievances without fear of reprisal.

As a complementary measure and as a means perhaps of reducing the number of grievances, the committee suggests inauguration of a more effective troop information program which will keep enlisted men acquainted with Marine Corps policy and its effect on them as individuals.

From the average citizen the reaction to these revelations is likely to be that something out to be done by somebody. The situation is one which must not be allowed to go uncorrected.

TOTAL ECLIPSES

THE U. S. will send experts to Egypt next February to observe a total eclipse of the sun calculated to last for three minutes. The United States Navy is particularly interested in the phenomenon to further certain studies relating to navigational and other problems.

If the experts will stay home, they will observe numerous total political eclipses in the United States next year. A tide of votes will come between aspirants and the shining offices they seek, obscuring the lovely prospect forever. This will happen scores of times in the primaries, in the conventions and in the general elections.

Such total eclipses at home may not have much to do with the navigational problems of the Navy, but they will have a heavy bearing on the shoals, tides, snags and other hazards which affect the navigation of the Ship of State.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

No matter whether one favors or opposes American diplomatic representation at the Vatican, it must be obvious that nothing can be gained by indecorous conduct in our relations with the Pope.

Nothing can be gained by the United States, nor does it strengthen Christianity in this era of a Marxian onslaught on the religions of God that so important a matter should be used to divert the attention from corruption in the internal revenue offices.

Surely President Truman knew that Congress was adjourning when he sent Gen. Mark Clark's nomination to the Senate; everybody else knew that. Why then throw this bomb at us?

The United States has had relations with the Vatican since 1797 when John B. Sartori, though only a consul, was granted diplomatic courtesies. At that time, the papal states were an extensive area in Italy, some 16,000 square miles as compared with 109 square miles today. However, it would seem from our best religious history, "Church and State in the United States," by Anson Phelps Stokes, that representation was opposed and faded as an issue until 1847 when President Polk sent a message to Congress on the subject:

"The secretary of state has submitted an estimate to defray the expense of opening diplomatic relations with the papal states. The interesting political events now in progress in these states, as well as a just regard to our commercial interests have in my opinion rendered such a measure highly expedient."

The consensus of opinion at that time was that whereas it would benefit this country to be represented at the Vatican politically, it would not be right to have representation to the pope as head of a church. The House of Representatives, in which there were only two Roman Catholic members, voted in favor of providing funds 137 to 15. The Senate also passed the measure and Jacob L. Martin, a convert to Catholicism, was appointed the first charge d'affaires.

William H. Seward, secretary of state, in 1862, wrote to Richard M. Blatchford, U. S. minister to the papal states:

"It was under these circumstances that this government, in 1848, wisely determined that while it maintained representatives in the capitals of every other civilized state, and even at the capitals of many semi-civilized states which reject the whole Christian religion, it was neither wise nor necessary to exclude Rome from the circle of our diplomatic intercourse. Thus far the new relation then established has proved pleasant and beneficial."

A major factor in the discontinuance of this representation was the unwillingness of the papal authorities to permit Protestant worship outside the legation grounds. An ambassador or a minister resident in a foreign country is, by the law of nations, permitted to worship in his own private chapel. But this had become difficult in Rome. Rufus L. King, our minister, wrote to Secretary of State Seward:

"It has not unfrequently occurred that the congregation, worshipping under the minister's roof, has reached the number of two hundred and fifty, or three hundred; and more than once has been much larger than could be accommodated in the apartments provided."

SYNOPSIS

When highly gregarious Dr. Nicholas Cowan asked Dr. Mollie Brooks, his lovely co-worker at Boone Hospital Group, to marry him, she turned him down flat. Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—American officials frankly are worried that the oil crisis in Iran may spread to other Middle Eastern countries such as Iraq and Saudi Arabia, with a possible loss of oil to the Western nations.

It is feared that the success of the oil policies of Iranian Premier Mohammed Mossadegh may arouse movements of a similar nature in the other Middle East nations.

Such nationalization drives in Iraq or Saudi Arabia would not have the repercussions involving Britain that the Iranian situation does but, nevertheless, they would confront the West with serious oil problems.

On the more immediate issue of Iran, United States officials feel that Britain has played its hand badly by not sensing the situation was coming up. It is felt the British should have made an early move to head off a crisis.

Experts now believe that the oil industry of Iran may be lost. They say the Iranians can't operate the refineries and there is no world market for crude oils which Iran plans to sell.

SUEZ PROBLEM—An even more serious Middle East problem now is the Suez canal dispute between Britain and Egypt. Look for the United States to urge upon the British a quick and amicable settlement of the controversy.

United States officials are concerned over growing sentiment in Egypt for a non-aggression pact with Russia. Such an Egyptian move would completely cancel out western plans for a Middle East defense alliance.

State department officials fear that such an Egyptian-Russian treaty will become a reality if the tense situation continues and more blood is shed over the Suez question.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson is expected to talk with British officials at the United Nations assembly in Paris, seeking a formula for ending the dispute. However, he may find it difficult to work out a settlement.

POLITICAL HOT POTATO—Back on the domestic scene, political experts are saying that President Truman may have seized a political "hot potato" when he nominated Gen. Mark Clark as the first United States ambassador to the Vatican.

Not only is it doubtful whether Clark will ever be approved by the Senate for the post, but the appointment may have strong repercussions in the 1952 election campaign if Mr. Truman decides to run again.

Most Washington observers feel that the Clark nomination was a political move. They say the timing of the appointment is certain to influence next year's campaigns.

Many of the Protestant sects are sure to bring strong pressure against the action on the grounds it violates the separation of church and state idea—and some Catholics also may turn against the President in the belief he was not sincere in his action.

DIXIE REVOLT—The President also faces trouble on other fronts. Strategy for a strong anti-Truman campaign by Southern Democrats may be mapped at the Southern Governors' conference in Arkansas in mid-November.

Gov. James F. Byrnes of South Carolina brought the anti-Truman drive into the open at the recent governors' meeting at Gatlinburg, Tenn., but he softened the discussions at that time.

Byrnes feels that the problem can be more appropriately talked over at the southerners' own conference at Hot Springs. The scope of the Dixie bolt will depend upon whom the party nominates for President. The most Byrnes can hope to accomplish on a realistic basis is to try to put a southerner on the ticket for vice president.

Mrs. Depew Head, Executive Director Ohioana Library, Is Speaker At Local Tea

Ohio's Authors To Be Honored

Martha Kinney Cooper, Ohioana Library Association will present its literary "Oscars" at its annual meeting, November 10, in the Neil House, Columbus.

As a preliminary to that event, Pickaway County committee for Ohioana Library Association entertained with a tea Thursday afternoon in the home of Mrs. John Eshelman III and presented Mrs. Depew Head, executive director of the library, speaking on the aims, activities, and accomplishments of the Association.

She said that six authors would be honored at the meeting which gets under way at 10 a. m. Special medals will go to Marion Renick and Robert Harper, both of Columbus, and Frank Siedel, of Cleveland. Prize winning authors include Richard D. Altick, an English professor at Ohio State University, Gary Jobe Akeley, born in Harrison County, and Amy Kelly, a native of Port Clinton.

Altick is being honored in the field of literary history and criticism for his book, "The Scholar Adventurers." Mary Jobe Akeley gets the award in the field of personal experience for "Congo Eden," and the historical biography prize goes to Amy Kelly's book, "Eleanor of Aquitaine and the Four Kings."

Mrs. Renick is the only woman to receive a special medal. Hers will be given in recognition of her contribution to children's books. Her latest book, written for boys of seven or eight, is called "Nicky's Football Team."

Robert Harper, newspaper man and former managing editor of a Columbus newspaper, gets special recognition because of his major contributions to Lincolniana. Lincoln authorities have been high in their praise of his book "Lincoln and the Press," a book needed, the critics say, for historical perspective.

Frank Siedel, a former student in the College of Journalism at Ohio State University, receives a special medal in recognition of his contributions in telling "The Ohio Story" over a network of radio stations, and for his book of the same title.

Governor Frank J. Lausche will bring greetings and an official welcome at the luncheon, scheduled for 12 noon. Some 200 Ohio authors will be introduced at this meeting and there are also several other special features for the afternoon session.

Ohioana Library founded in 1929, is the only one of its kind in the United States. Located in Room 1109 State Office Building, it contains 9189 books and brochures. More than 4000 Ohio writers are represented in the Library. Some 300 composers are represented in the music collection.

Pickaway County committee members are Mrs. T. L. Huston, Mrs. H. N. Stevenson, Mrs. Enid Penham and Mrs. Eshelman.

Guests invited to the affair were: Mrs. Frank Bennett, Mrs. Harry Heffner, Mrs. Emmitt Crist, Mrs. Steve Jones, Miss Helen Hoffman, Mrs. Ward Robinson, Mrs. C. G. Shulze, Mrs. Clark Will, Mrs. Robert Musser, Mrs. David Harman, Mrs. Helen Anderson and Mrs. G. I. Nickerson.

Mrs. Tom Renick, Miss Ann Renick, Mrs. E. S. Shane, Mrs. Joseph Adkins Jr., Mrs. R. R. Bales, Miss Alice Ada May, Mrs. R. S. Hosler, Mrs. Roger May, Mrs. W. B. Kellstadt, Mrs. G. D. Phillips, Mrs. James I. Smith, Mrs. Charles H. May, Mrs. Charles Pugsley and Miss Jeanette Reichelderfer.

Child Culture League Meets

The showing of a film, "Families First," opened the meeting of Child Culture League, held Thursday evening in Mrs. Tom Harden's home on South Washington street. At the business meeting it was voted to change the meeting night to the first Wednesday in each month. It was also decided to have a bake sale in November.

Following the meeting, refreshments were served by the hostess. Next meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. Clark Martin of South Court street.

8 reasons not to VOTE

1 Maybe you think a little more of Comrade Joe than you do of Uncle Sam. Joe licks his chops when you stay away from the polls. In the last Presidential election 45 million qualified voters stayed away.

6 You don't know anything about the issues and the candidates. It's nothing to be really proud of, but it doesn't take long to get up to date.

2 You think your time is too valuable to wait a few minutes for your turn at the polling place. You have more "important" things to do.

7 You think it's all "politics" anyway—and it certainly will be as long as you and folks like you stay home.

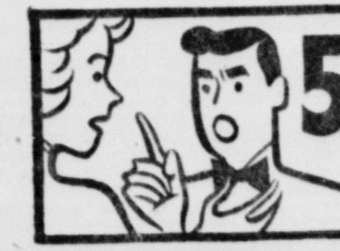

3 What the heck's the good of "my one little old vote? Let George vote." And George decides to let you vote. So a lot of you's and Georges stay away from the polls—and lose an election.

8 Your corn hurts—but remember a lot of freedom-loving Americans get to the polls on crutches and in wheel chairs.

4 You moved. That's a reason for not voting this election, but, folks, it really won't do to use that excuse a second time.

5 The wife likes one candidate and the husband likes the other. It's obvious your votes will cancel out each other, but each helps to swell the total of your favorite candidate.

mark your "X" for freedom.

These Marks are Legal

In each case a cross has been used, and the intersection of the lines of the cross is inside the circle or square.

These Spoil Your Ballot

Top 3 ballots are invalid because crosses were not used. Bottom 3 ballots are void because the lines of the cross do not intersect within the square.

Household Hints

To serve with tomato juice or fruit juice as first course for dinner, mix crisp bits of bacon with peanut butter and spread on small crackers.

If you're making cookies, and butter is too hard, put mixing bowl in the sink and let hot water run into it. Dry it thoroughly and, while still very warm, cream butter and sugar. The heat of the bowl will melt the butter.

Yank Ryder Cup Team Holds Big Lead In Tourney

PINEHURST, N.C., Nov. 3 — America's top professional golfers had a stranglehold on their fifth straight Ryder Cup victory today as they interrupted the international competition with Britain to relax at the Tennessee-North Carolina football game.

The United States delegation moved into a 3-to-1 lead yesterday by winning three of four foursomes in a cold-soaking rain.

The Britons, although still optimistic, faced the terrific chore of winning six of tomorrow's eight singles matches to take the cup for the first time since 1933.

Although the U.S. did just that in 1949 to win, 7 to 5, after trailing in the foursomes, Britain's play would have to undergo a sudden sharp improvement for it to win this time.

Putting told the story in yesterday's play with the Americans proving deadly in the greens, while the Britons missed many important short and medium-length putts.

U.S. Captain Sam Snead said: "We're very happy the way the matches turned out. It certainly puts us in a lot better shape for the singles."

Snead and Lloyd Mangrum downed Britain's John Panton and James Adams, 5 and 4; National Open Champion Ben Hogan and Jimmy Demaret triumphed by the same score over Fred Daly and Ben Bousfield, and Clayton Haefer teamed with Jack Burke Jr. to down Dai Rees and British Open Titleholder Max Faulkner, 5 and 3.

The lone British point was scored by Art Lees, who holds course records on five British links, and Charles Ward. They defeated Henry Ransom and Ed (Porky) Oliver, 2 and 1.

The elusive halfback made another fine run two plays later, but the 11-yard spring was called back because of a penalty against the CHS'ers.

FUMBLES WERE common during the encounter, but not so much as most fans had anticipated. Circleville and Westerville committed only four bobbles each during the evening of handling the slippery ball.

A tribute to both teams during the game was the way in which they battled in the snow. While the fans huddled behind heaps of blankets, the griders were rolling in the snow to give them their show.

Circleville high school's marching band had planned earlier to make the trip to Westerville, but Levy's deal with Solazzo was to control point spreads by calling fouls and such infractions as traveling against favored teams. O'Connor said the referee was successful in only three of the contests and that Solazzo took a financial beating in the other three.

The official was dropped from the NBA's roster this season because of "unsatisfactory" work last year.

Double Overtime Win Chalked Up By Williamsport

Williamsport's Deer basketball team opened their 1951-52 season Friday night with a double overtime, sudden death 41-39 victory over invading Atlanta Red Raider cagers.

It was the first game to be played in Williamsport's new gymnasium, and the Deers made the dedication ceremony in spectacular fashion.

Williamsport opened strongly in the first stanza of the photo-finish contest with a 12-6 lead over the Raiders.

Atlanta swarmed back in a low-scoring second period, however, trailing by only an 18-17 margin at halftime. Both teams fought to earn 29 points at the three-quarters mark, and then the game went into overtime when both teams ended in a dead heat at 39-all as the final second of play ticked off.

IN THE FIRST overtime, Williamsport took the tipoff and cautiously sought for a sure shot at the hoop. The Deers never lost possession of the ball. They never shot.

In the second, "sudden death" overtime, the Deers again took the tipoff and made an attempt to work the ball in for a sure shot, which would mean the victory.

After having the ball in possession about two minutes, the Deers gave up trying to work in through Atlanta's rigid defense and John Wardell flipped a long shot over the heads of the Raiders. The ball stripped the netting. Williamsport won 41-39.

High-scoring honors in the contest were won by Atlanta's Harley Evans, who bucketed 13 counters, while Ronnie James, a sophomore, led scoring for Williamsport with 10.

In the preliminary tilt, Williamsport's reserves made the evening complete for the home fans by walloping the invading Raider reservists by a 47-15 margin.

Next games for both the Deers and Raiders will be next Friday night, when the Pickaway County basketball League opens. Atlanta will play host to Salt Creek's Warriors and Williamsport will travel to Walnut.

Box score of Friday's double overtime Williamsport win follows:

Football Greats To Be Named

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J., Nov. 3—The first group of football immortals to be enshrined in the sport's new Hall of Fame will be selected today by a 12-member honors court prior to the Rutgers-Fordham football game.

More than 200 nominations will be considered, and if the task is not completed today it will be continued tomorrow. Players are not eligible until ten years after the end of their collegiate careers.

Farmers Getting 49 Cents Of Food Dollar

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3—The Agriculture Department predicted today that farmers will get about 49 cents of every food dollar the consumer spends in 1952.

Department economists say higher labor and transportation costs will help account for part of the remaining 51 cents.

Up to now, consumers have been splitting their food dollar almost fifty-fifty with farmers and the marketing and processing industries.

In 1933, the farmer's share dropped to 32 cents, and in 1945 it rose to a peak of 54 cents.

However, farmers have received less than 50 cents of the consumer dollar in every year since 1918, except for the period between 1943 and 1948.

After the 1945 record high the farmer's share dropped gradually to 48 cents in 1948, and then fell sharply in 1949 and 1950.

Just before the Korean outbreak last June farmers were getting a postwar low of 6 cents, but by February they were up to the 31 cent level again.

These statistics, however, give only a rough idea of the total farm picture. Some farmers receive a rather high share of the consumer dollar, while others get very little.

A farmer gets 75 cents of the food dollar for choice beef and a nickel less for lamb.

Chicken producers receive about 54 cents of every consumer dollar, but apple growers are lucky to get 40 cents.

Processed foods give the farmer an even smaller share; 25 cents for canned peas, 19 cents for canned peaches, 24 cents for ice cream and 16 cents for white bread.

A woman's hand-squeeze averages about 45 pounds; a man's about 80.

In 1867, Congress refused to appropriate further funds and thus, the mission ceased, not to be revived, until Mr. Truman appointed General Clark to it, except that during 1939, President Roosevelt appointed Myron C. Taylor to this post as the "personal representative of the President of the United States of America to his holiness, Pope Pius XII."

As this position did not exist in law and as Taylor served without personal compensation, the matter did not come before the Congress. Taylor was not an official of this government. His appointment in this manner was a subterfuge.

The question of such representation is indeed a vexed one. The Vatican is a state with its own flag, courts, postal service, currency, etc. The pope is, in this sense, a temporal ruler. Also, the Vatican does represent the most militant and effective moral force in European affairs.

The attempt on the part of the Truman administration to explain the value of sending an ambassador to the Vatican on the grounds of a good listening post is a shame-

New Insoles May Add Life To GI Shoes

CINCINNATI, Nov. 3—American GIs today are wearing a newly-treated insole in their shoes which may lengthen the life of their footwear.

Dr. Fred O'Flaherty, director of the University of Cincinnati's tanners' council research laboratory, disclosed today that the new insole leather with 200 to 300 percent higher serviceability has been developed at the university.

It consists chiefly in a double tanning of the leather, on one hand, and use of chrome tanning on top of the regular vegetable tanning on the other.

less exposure of religious personnel behind the Iron Curtain to the charge of espionage; surely neither Catholic nor Protestant favors that.

The issue now goes into the 1952 campaign where it does not belong. Protestants and Catholics will quarrel over it and forget the corruption of the tax collectors. Truman has again proved his genius at sly devices.

Brownies Ready For Card Tilt

CLEVELAND, Nov. 3—The National Football League Champion Cleveland Browns had their final workout yesterday before flying to Chicago to meet the Cardinals.

The Browns left Cleveland this morning with a full complement of players and only one doubtful starter for Sunday's contest.

Bob Gaudio, offensive guard who has a troublesome right shoulder, will accompany the team but may not see action. In the event he is sidelined, his post will be filled by Alex Agase, veteran defensive line-backer.

Marino Defends World Fly

Double Overtime Win Chalked Up By Williamsport

Williamsport's Deer basketball team opened their 1951-52 season Friday night with a double overtime, sudden death 41-39 victory over invading Atlanta Red Raider cagers.

It was the first game to be played in Williamsport's new gymnasium, and the Deers made the dedication ceremony in spectacular fashion.

Williamsport opened strongly in the first stanza of the photo-finish contest with a 12-6 lead over the Raiders.

Atlanta swarmed back in a low-scoring second period, however, trailing by only an 18-17 margin at halftime. Both teams fought to earn 29 points at the three-quarters mark, and then the game went into overtime when both teams ended in a dead heat at 29 all as the final second of play ticked off.

IN THE FIRST overtime, Williamsport took the tipoff and cautiously sought for a sure shot at the hoop. The Deers never lost possession of the ball. They never shot.

In the second, "sudden death" overtime, the Deers again took the tipoff and made an attempt to work the ball for a sure shot, which would mean the victory.

After having the ball in possession about two minutes, the Deers gave up trying to work in through Atlanta's rigid defense and John Wardell flipped a long shot over the heads of the Raiders. The ball stripped the netting. Williamsport won 41-39.

High-scoring honors in the contest were won by Atlanta's Harley Evans, who bucketed 13 counters, while Ronnie James, a sophomore, led scoring for Williamsport with 10.

In the preliminary tilt, Williamsport's reserves made the evening complete for the home fans by walloping the invading Raider reservists by a 47-15 margin.

Next games for both the Deers and Raiders will be next Friday night, when the Pickaway County basketball League opens. Atlanta will play host to Salt Creek's Warriors and Williamsport will travel to Walnut.

Football Greats To Be Named

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J., Nov. 3—The first group of football immortals to be enshrined in the sport's new Hall of Fame will be selected today by a 12-member honors court prior to the Rutgers-Fordham football game.

More than 200 nominations will be considered, and if the task is not completed today it will be continued tomorrow. Players are not eligible until ten years after the end of their collegiate careers.

Farmers Getting 49 Cents Of Food Dollar

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The Agriculture Department predicted today that farmers will get about 49 cents of every food dollar the consumer spends in 1952.

Department economists say higher labor and transportation costs will help account for part of the remaining 51 cents.

Up to now, consumers have been splitting their food dollar almost fifty-fifty with farmers and the marketing and processing industries.

In 1933, the farmer's share dropped to 32 cents, and in 1945 it rose to a peak of 54 cents.

However, farmers have received less than 50 cents of the consumer dollar in every year since 1918, except for the period between 1943 and 1948.

After the 1948 record high the farmer's share dropped gradually to 48 cents in 1949, and then fell sharply in 1949 and 1950.

Just before the Korean outbreak last June farmers were getting a postwar low of 6 cents, but by February they were up to the 51 cent level again.

These statistics, however, give only a rough idea of the total farm picture. Some farmers receive a rather high share of the consumer dollar, while others get very little.

A farmer gets 75 cents of the food dollar for choice beef and a nickel less for lamb.

Chicken producers receive about 54 cents of every consumer dollar, but apple growers are lucky to get 40 cents.

Processed foods give the farmer an even smaller share; 25 cents for canned peas, 19 cents for canned peaches, 24 cents for ice cream and 16 cents for white bread.

A woman's hand-squeeze averages about 45 pounds; a man's about 80.

Sokolsky's These Days

In 1967, Congress refused to appropriate further funds and thus, the mission ceased, not to be revived, until Mr. Truman appointed General Clark to it, except that during 1939, President Roosevelt appointed Myron C. Taylor to this post as the "personal representative of the President of the United States of America to his holiness, Pope Pius XII."

As this position did not exist in law and as Taylor served without personal compensation, the matter did not come before the Congress.

Taylor was not an official of this government. His appointment in this manner was a subterfuge.

The question of such representation is indeed a vexed one. The Vatican is a state with its own flag, courts, postal service, currency, etc. The pope is, in this sense, a temporal ruler. Also, the Vatican does represent the most militant and effective moral force in European affairs.

The attempt on the part of the Truman administration to explain the value of sending an ambassador to the Vatican on the grounds of a good listening post is a shame-

New Insoles May Add Life To GI Shoes

CINCINNATI, Nov. 3.—American GIs today are wearing a newly-treated insole in their shoes which may lengthen the life of their footgear.

Dr. Fred O'Flaherty, director of the University of Cincinnati's tanners' council research laboratory, disclosed today that the new insole leather with 200 to 300 percent higher serviceability has been developed at the university.

It consists chiefly in a double tanning of the leather, on one hand, and use of chrome tanning on top of the regular vegetable tanning on the other.

less exposure of religious personnel behind the Iron Curtain to the charge of espionage; surely neither Catholic nor Protestant favors that.

The issue now goes into the 1952 campaign where it does not belong. Protestants and Catholics will quarrel over it and forget the corruption of the tax collectors. Truman has again proved his genius at sly devices.

Marino Defends World Fly Title

HONOLULU, Nov. 3.—Veteran Dado Marino, retained his world flyweight boxing championship Thursday night by pounding out a one-sided 15-round decision over England's Terry Allen.

Nine thousand fans in Honolulu Stadium saw the 35-year-old Marino fight a shrewdly strategic battle in repeating his victory of 15 months ago when he wrested the title from the game Englishman.

Marino ran up a big lead in the first five rounds. In the second and third frames he had Allen hanging from the ropes.

Marino's victory was a big one for the flyweight division, which has been inactive most of the summer.

U. S. Must Build Civilian Defense

By MILLARD CALDWELL
U. S. Civil Defense Director

(Editor's Note: This is the sixth of a series of articles on civil defense, based on the booklet "This Is Civil Defense" prepared by the Federal Civil Defense Administration.)

Civil Defense does many things before an attack. The most important is preparedness. It gives you information on how to safeguard your home, how to fight fires, and what steps to take against atomic, biological, and chemical warfare. It arranges for shelters and operates the warning system which notifies you when to use them. It gets medical supplies and special equipment ready, trains technical services needed to restore a stricken area, and organized mutual aid and mobile support.

There are two steps which everyone can take to get into civil defense. The first and most basic is to inform yourself what you and your family as individuals can do to protect yourselves against enemy attack.

You can learn how to protect your home from fire, how to handle injuries among your family until trained first aid help can be obtained, how to minimize the dangers of attacks by poison gas and biological warfare.

You can do this by reading a series of booklets available from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington 25, D.C. They are:

"Survival Under Atomic Attack"
"What You Should Know About Biological Warfare"
"This Is Civil Defense"

"Emergency Action to Save Lives"

"Firefighting For Householders"

But this is just the beginning. The second step, and it can be taken at the same time you are studying the booklets, is to join your local civil defense organization. There you will get professional training in meeting the dangers of an enemy attack and become part of the team defending your community.

One of the most important functions of civil defense before an attack is the organizing of mutual aid and mobile support.

THE FIRST is help from the neighbors. No matter how well prepared a city might be, after an attack it could not take care of itself. It would have to look to neighboring suburbs, cities and states for help. And that help must be just as well organized and trained as the civil defense organization in the city which has been knocked out. That is the meaning of mutual aid.

Mutual aid pacts to help each other in case of disaster or enemy attack have been drawn up by many cities. In operation it works like this: If your city were hit by an atomic bomb, nearby towns would send fire, police, and rescue crews to help out, or your city would do the same for other communities, for mutual aid works both ways. The same operation would take place between States, since many of them have also drawn up mutual aid pacts.

Mobile support is organized to supply more help, but on a State-wide or inter-state scale. It is made up of teams which can move rapidly.

These teams would be loaded into cars, trucks, trains or planes and rushed to the scene of disaster. Such a stricken area might be in another part of the State, instead of next door, or in another State altogether.

Mobile support groups will be manned by people on farms or in small cities and towns outside of target areas. They will assemble outside of such areas and function just like the civil defense organizations in the larger cities.

Some States do not call their mutual aid or mobile support systems by the same names and not all of them are organized exactly alike. But the important thing is, all States have a "help from and for the neighbors" operations plan.

It is your duty, no matter where you are, to serve in some civil defense organization. You may be called upon to take your part in any one of these civil defense operations. Be ready. Know what to do when that time comes.

(The next article will discuss your part in civil defense.)

Air Conditioning Being Boomed For U.S. Homes

CLEVELAND, Nov. 3—An industry spokesman predicted today that more than 1,600,000 American homes will be enjoying partial or complete air conditioning within the next five years.

Cloud Wampler, president of Carrier Corp., told a Cleveland group that recent strides made in air conditioning also would affect designs of new homes.

He estimated that by 1956 there will be 45 million electrically-served homes in the United States.

Wampler spoke at the opening of the new environment laboratory of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers.

The laboratory will be used to study human comfort in heated and cooled indoor spaces and to develop data for the design and installation of panel heating and cooling systems.

American Christmas cards made their debut about 76 years ago.

HOW TO DETECT TERMITES

Termites, sometimes mistakenly called "white ants," are tiny, wood-eating insects, living in well-organized colonies. It is conservatively estimated that these insects destroy over three hundred million dollars worth of property each year. Termites are a hidden public enemy. Day and night they work, silently and unseen, eating deeper and deeper into sound timber, until finally nothing remains but a thin, empty shell. No unprotected wood is safe from the attack of the termite. One queen at full maturity can produce from 50 to 75 thousand eggs per day.

Only rarely is the presence of termites detected before considerable damage has been done, and frequently not until the timber collapses. Termites may now be destroying your building, unseen and unsuspected.

There are two ways to find out whether your home is being attacked by termites. First, you may see winged reproductive termites (often called "flying ants") around your home in the Spring or Fall. This is a positive indication of a termite colony nearby, perhaps under your own house. Second the most certain method is to let a Newark Termite Control trained inspector examine your property. There is no charge or obligation. On request, an inspector will check your property for termites and termite damage and give you a reliable report on its condition.
